ENGINEER CHARGES FAVORITISM

JOHNSON ATTACKS CAPITOL ARCHITECT

State Engineer Claims Certain Contractors and Equipment Companies Were Favored in Specifications.

WILL SUBMIT HIS EVIDENCE TO BOARD

Secretary of Commission Asserts That Specifications Were So Drawn That Only One Company Could Bid.

Evidence will be submitted to the state capitol commission at its next meeting on March 8, by State Engineer George E. Johnson, its secretary, in an attempt to show that certain contractors and equipment companies were favored by Architect B. G. Goodhue of New York in the specifications drawn by him for bids on the structural work of the new capitol.

Mr. Johnson declines, in advance of the commission's meeting, to make public detailed information along this line which he has in his possession. In a general way, he indicated that various kinds of structural material and furnishings of the building were specified by the architect in such a way that only one concern in the United States could supply them.

A sample of this is said to be the steel window frames that are to be be used. Under Goodhue's specifications, these were to be of the "three point contact" type manufactured exclusively by one New York concern. After the capitol commission changed this requirement so as to let in other bidders, Goodhue is reported to have ordered a special patented casing around te windows which the same firm makes.

This particular item, it is understood, has not yet been finally settled by the capitol commission. A saving of $12,000 could be made, according to Secretary Johnson, and a heavier steel frame secured from another firm in Philadelphia. The latter house will furnish a special frame somewhat similar to the one specified by the architect, for $1,400 more than its bid price.

Radiators Also Preferred.

The original specifications called for the installation of steam radiators with "screw nipples," which are a distinctive patent made by one particular manufacturing firm. After the capitol commission had changed them to permit competitive bids, another company got the contract.

Window glass specifications, it is claimed, were likewise drawn so that one company at Pittsburg had the inside track. On many other materials and articles, the architect is declared to have specified certain points which indirectly designated particular trade marked articles.

The capitol commission found it advisable, before awarding contracts last July, to send out a circular letter to all prospective bidders informing them that they need not conform strictly to the specifications in this regard, but that any standard article would be considered on its merits.

The only piece of stone in the new building, so far laid, which meets the contract requirements as to color, texture and other details, Secretary Johnson stated, is the memorial block, or cornerstone, at the northeast corner. It has a very distinctive appearance compared with the other pieces in the wall alongside and above it.

Johnson and Prof. Clark Mickey of the state university engineering department will go over the walls this week and mark the pieces of stone which are extremely porous, tending to disintegrate. These will be removed and other pieces put in. The rest of the stone is considered all right, except that it is not a select grade for color, and the capitol commission will demand a reduced price for it on that account. The contract and specifications called for stone of smooth texture and uniform color.

Explains Why He Waited.

In reply to a question as to why he did not order the stone rejected when it was delivered, instead of allowing part of it to go into the walls, Johnson said:

"In the first place, I knew that the state was entirely safe because only $19,000 had been allowed and paid on estimates for stone work; whereas the firm of Henry Struble & Co., which is doing the work, had completed half of the granite course along the ground line, for which the contract price is $53,000, and this part of the job is entirely satisfactory. Also, there was a large amount of Bedford stone on hand and constantly arriving, which could have been held by the state for any defect of workmanship.

"In the second place, I wanted to make a thorough investigation and tests and get all the information possible before making any statement. I began investigation last November and, with Professor Mickey's help, have secured exact data on all the matters involved, including visits to the quarries where stone is produced and tests upon samples obtained from each.

"Still another reason was that I wanted to hear directly from Architect Goodhue himself as to whether he approved the material we were getting. He was out here in December, looked the walls over, and assured the commission that the stone was of the same quality and texture as his office manager, Mr. A. C. Mayer, had O. K.'d in a sample wall built at the quarry."

Plans Declared Faulty.

Besides the architect's failure to secure stone that is up to the specified standard, Secretary Johnson says that numerous errors have been found in his plans for the capitol building, necessitating fifty or more changes after construction work began. The cost is substantially increased by these items, he says.

At one place, foundation walls had to be increased in thickness from 2 feet to 3 feet 6 inches, in order to provide proper footing for the superstructure, the state engineer declared. After the foundation work had been started, it was found that the walls along the inside courts were not properly placed for those to go above them, and they had to be made wider for that reason, Mr. Johnson said.

Incorrect measurements were also shown for the location of heating and ventilating ducts. As a result, it has been necessary to cut a number of new holes in the foundation walls for pipes and conduits to pass through, and to fill up the holes which were in the wrong place. Some of the holes had to be cut 12 inches in diameter through 2 feet of solid concrete. This work cost $300 to $400 extra.

Goodhue's Excuse.

At the capitol commission meeting last Friday, Architect Goodhue is quoted as saying that, if the Bedford stone being used was defective in texture and would not resist disintegration processes he should not be held responsible because he was not a geologist and had no technical knowledge on the strength of stone.

"That is no excuse at all," said Secretary Johnson. "The state is paying Mr. Goodhue $25,000 a year to supervise construction of the new capitol, and it is up to him to see that the material which goes into it is up to standard. If he does not know himself, he should secure expert advice from someone who does. It does not require a geologist to judge the different grades of stone. Any intelligent and observant man could do so by its appearance and texture, after spending a day or two in a testing laboratory."

After the basement contract was let nearly a year ago for the outer section of the building, the plans and the itemized description specified exterior funodation walls that were not heavy enough to carry the load upon them. An extra 4 inches had to be added to the walls, costing $9,000 additional.

Certain partition walls in the basement, whic hwere entirely omitted fro mthe plans, had to be put in after the work began, so as to provide a footing for the weight of the building overhead. This cost another $3,000.

The first section of the superstructure, now being erected, leaves the middle of the building open from east to west, so that the old capitol inside can be torn down, the materials removed, and space left for taking out dirt and moving new materials in for the central portion to be built afterward. This will necessarily leave the north and south divisions separated from each other, and the inner wides will have to be left incomplete till the central section is built and joined on.

Notwithstanding this obvious feature, Secretary Johnson says the contract for the first section, based on the architect's specifications, covered all interior finish, friezes, wall and ceiling decorations for the rooms adjacent to the inner section. If this work kere done, ti would subsequently have to be taken out and patched up again. The contract will be revised to eliminate the unecessary work.

Mutineers Hold Ship in Terror

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 26.—Nine armed sailors, plotting with twenty-nine stowaways, held the voyage of the 6,000 ton freighter Taibu Maru under a virtual reign of terror during her voyage from Kobe, Japan, to this port, it was learned today. The voyage, which was dominated by the rebellious party, ended late last night when the vessel arrived.

The tempestuous trip was revealed after the captain of the Taibu Maru wirelessed to this port for help and on arrival here the crew members and stowaways were arrested.

The stowaways made their appearance on deck a few days after the vessel left Kobe and joined by nine members of the crew, most of them heavily armed, took charge of the vessel.

KU KLUX DEFENSE BY KLAN SPEAKER

Rev. Zack Harris Addresses Large Crowd at Auditorium Sunday.

Organization Stands For the Fundamental Principles of Democratic Government.

Ku Klux Klan membership to protect America against the alleged evils of immigration, rule by the pope, and the negro challenge to white supremacy, was the theory advanced by Rev. Zack A. Harris at a K. K. K. mass meeeting at the auditorium Sunday afternoon. Although admission was strictly by ticket, the auditorium was jammed, evidently with a crowd sympathetic with Mr. Harris' organization from the applause received.

Repeatedly the speaker told his listeners to believe nothing they read in the press of the nation. Some Lincoln and Omaha newspapers were mentioned and criticized for distortion of news regarding Ku Klux affairs.

Before Mr. Harris' address the audience was asked to sing America, and to repeat the words of the Lord's prayer.

The klan, Mr. Harris said, stood for the fundamental principles of democratic government. The constitution with its bill of rights, the declaration of independence and the Monroe doctrine were mentioned. Free speech, free press, and above all religious freedom were mentioned.

Pope Pius, the seventh, said Mr. Harris, rejected the constitution of the United States as against the canons of the Roman Catholic church. The pope was characterized as claiming the power to rule lands, crown kings, reject laws and public documents, and having power both spiritual and temporal.

The liberal constitution of Mexico because it contained a provision for religious freedom, was said to have roused the ire of the pope and brought from him a command that all Mexican Catholics refuse to obey it.

Maximillian was said to have been forced on Mexico by the pope and the Holy Alliance of European powers. "The Holy Alliance exists to the present day," said the speaker, although this was said to be generally not realized.

More Restriction Needed.

"Are we Americanizing aliens or are the aliens alienizing us," asked the speaker. Fifty-one per cent of our population is made up of either negroes or foreign born, he said. Forty-five per cent of the four and one-half million men drafted during the war were unable to speak English, he further asserted. Present immigration laws were not considered satisfactory as it was considered that still more restriction was needed. The immigrant of today also came in for his share of criticism.

Referring again to the Catholic church Mr. Harris claimed that in eighteen states the Catholic population outnumbered that of all other churches combined, while in nineteeen more the Catholics possessed a large plurality. Sixty-five per cent of the elected and appointive officers were said to be Catholics. The large number of Catholics on the New York police force was also considered a very serious problem. "Don't take the newspaper's report, now," Mr. Harris again cautioned the audience.

The question of white supremacy was given but little attention, the speaker contenting himself with the statement that all process had been brought about by the white race and hence this should be at all costs preserved.

If the public only knew what sublime reason lay back of it, there wouldd be no criticism of the klan for the wearing of masks, he said.

Two million already belong to the klan, said Mr. Harris, and he stated that it was his belief that a membership of fifteen million might yet be reached. Mention of the Mer Rouge affair was made but Mr. Harris merely professed amusement at charges against the klan.

Cards were distributed at the door to be filled out and mailed to the Lincoln representatives asking for membership. These asked for a complete history, religious and otherwise, of the applicant.

"Big Tim" Enroute to Prison; Seems in Jovial Spirits

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 26. — "Big Tim" Murphy, Chicago labor leader, was in a jocular mood when he stepped from a train at the union station here this morning for a few minutes' relaxation before the resumption of his journey to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. Murphy was convicted of participation in $385,000 Dearborn station mail robbery and must serve a four-year prison sentence.

"There is no use in kicking, boys," Murphy told newspaper men. "I'm going through with this. You know me; I'm no quitter.

The prisoner was neatly attired and appeared in the best of humor and health.

CITY EMPLOYE UNDER ARREST

South Lincoln Resident Says Water Meter Reader Approached Daughter.

Man Held in Jail Served Term in State Prison, Police Declare.

Police have been holding a man named Hagel, known to the city water department as Tom Hagel, a water meter reader in the employ of the city, since Saturday afternoon on the complaint of a resident of South Lincoln who charges that Hagel attempted to attack his ten-year-old daughter while she was playing in the yard of her home.

Captain Andersen, chief of detectives, declares that Hagel has served a term in the Nebraska state penitentiary on conviction of rape, having been sentenced to from one to ten years in 1912 and having been discharged in 1915. Hagel has worked for the city for three years as meter reader, his employers not knowing of his previous prison record. Police say he is a married man with one child.

Hagel admits a part of the child's story but denies any intention of an assault according to Capt. Anderson. Deputy County Attorney Max Towle said he would file charges against Hagel Monday afternoon, the exact nature of which had not been cided upon at noon Monday. Hagel admits accidental indecent exposure but declares the children surprised him while they were playing hide and see, police say. The child's story has convinced the police that the man is not fit to be at liberty, they said. The name used for the little girl who suffered a severe fright, will be the meaningless one of Mary Doe.

Past Record Unknown.

Hagel wore an official badge as meter reader and has been given access to countless homes for many months. He was employed, the water department officials explained, at a time when workmen were very scarce and having been satisfactory on a job which it is difficult to get men to take, had been continued in the city's employ. No one had inquired into his past record. From the city he receives $104.50 per month for his work.

The children were playing in the yard when Hagel appeared. After frightening the girl, he disappeared, while a neighbor, hearing screams, found the little girl and heard her story. Following a description furnished by the child the neighbor found the meter reader on the boulevard and offering him a ride to town, drove him direct to the police station.

Rumors of the affair spread through South Lincoln Sunday and excited a considerable amount of comment, the principal topic being the apparent carelessness of the city in allowing men of questionable reputations and records to carry official badges that allow them to enter homes.

MAY INTRODUCE A NEW BUDGET

Indications Neither McKelvie Nor Bryan Appropriations to Be Accepted.

Committee Expected to Recommend Finance Bill Based on Dysart Measures.

The finance, ways and means committee of the representative diet is scheduled to meet Monday afternoon for the purpose of drafting a couple of appropriation bills of its own, Tuesday being the last day on which such measures can be introduced. Both Chairman Mears and Green of Lancaster, member of the committee are authority for the statement that it was improbable that the budget of either Governor Bryan or former Governor McKelvie would be adopted, and it is the general understanding that the appropriations proposed will be along the lines suggested by the Dysart group of bills.

The Dysart bills contemplate a revision of the code and not its abolition as proposed by the governor. Under this revision three code departments are to be abolished, they being public welfare, agriculture and labor. In lieu of these there is created a new department to be known as that of inspections and permits, thus making four instead of six code departments. There is also a reduction in the salaries of some of the code secretaries.

This is the republican plan to date, but it is not certain that it will be successful. The Bryan budget does not contain any provision for the pay of code secretaries and employes and any appropriation not contained in the governor's budget must have sixty votes in the house. The republicans have not this many votes and it is not at all certain that they can control all of the members of their party on this matter. It is not thought that they can secure a single democratic or third party vote, so it is considered next to certain that the appropriation bills to be presented Tuesday are doomed to defeat.

MAIL ROBBERS BUSY IN EAST

Theft of Thousands of Dollars From Registry Pouches Last Week Reported After Bandit Works on New York Central Train Sunday.

THINK JOB "PULLED" BY ORGANIZED BAND

Postal Inspectors Declare the Gang Has Headquarters in Windy City—Sabbath Day Loot Will Not Amount to More Than $10,000.

(Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Theft of thousands of dollars of registered mail from a New York Central train between Syracuse and Albany several days ago was reported by authoritative sources. The robbery, it was said, was similar to that in Grand Central terminal yesterday.

Postal inspectors and railroad police today declared that last night's robbery of mail pouches on a Chicago train with through mail from San Francisco by a lone bandit was the third that took place on the same train within two months. The bandit escaped.

Both postal inspectors and railroad police declared it their belief that the robber had boarded the train at some up-state point and had made his way into one of the steel mail cars before reaching Grand Central station.

The bandit's sole haul was said to have been one registered package, mailed in Chicago.

Work of Organized Band.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—An organized band of mail thieves, who are believed to have their main headquarters in Chicago, is being sought by postoffice inspectors today as the result of the latest robbery of a mail pouch from "No. 32," a Chicago-New York flyer on the New York Central. The bandit escaped in a hail of bullets over heavily charged electric tracks and wiring.

Postoffice agents checking up on the value of the loot contained in the stolen mail pouch, declared the amount not to be considerable, probably less than 10,000.

BRYAN COMES TO AID OF FEES BILL

Governor Bryan brought his heavy artillery to the rescue of the house bill cutting auto license fees in half Monday morning. The measure faces an unfavorable report from committee in the near future, but the governor insists that it was a major issue in the campaign, and that his election showed the people want it, forecasting an attempt to override the committee.

It is this slice in auto licenses that Mr. Bryan figures on for $3,000,000 of his proposed $9,000,000 tax reduction. There are 250,000 automobiles and trucks in the state, which pay an average fee of $12.50. In his bill the governor proposes that the half of this fund now going to county roads be collected and used for the same purpose, while the half being used to aid the state on federal aid roads be cancelled.

SPRING TO SEE BUILDING BOOM

Plans For Number of Improvements Before City Council.

1923 Construction Work May Set New Record For Lincoln.

The opening of spring was evident in the city council Monday afternoon when that body was confronted with plans and specifications for a number of improvement districts including paving and water mains which will start a year of construction work that it is hoped will set a new record for Lincoln.

Four paving districts which will cost a total of $29,200 were ready for final consideration, the contracts and specifications being approved Monday and four water districts amounting to $12,375 in total estimated cost were likewise approved. The paving plans cover 486, Sumner street, Fourteenth to Seventeenth to cost $8,000; Pawnee street, Thirteenth to Sixteenth, costing $7,100; Van Dorn street, Sheridan boulevard to Williams street, costing $7,100; Walnut court, Thirtieth to Thirty-first, Kleckner court, Thirty-first to Thirty-second and Thirty-first street, Walnut court to R street, costing $7,000.

A new ordinance establishing the grades in the new Country Club park addition was introduced, changing the name of that addition to rend Woods Brothers Country Club Park addition.

Aside from the renewal of building activity as evidenced by the filings listed above from the office of the city engineer, the council was confronted with the smallest amount of official business ever seen. The meeting was scheduled to be short and quiet.

WALLACE CITES PRINCIPALS IN CONSOLIDATION

TO HOLD HEARING IN WASHINGTON APRIL 2

Cabinet Member Declares He Told Meat Barons Proposal Not in Favor and Warned Against Carrying Out of Big Deal as Planned.

(Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Armour and company, and Morris and company, Chicago packers, were today served by the secretary of agriculture with a complaint charging them with violation of the packers and stockyards act in connection with the tentative acquistion of the plants and business of Morris and company by the Armour interests.

Secretary Wallace set April 2 for a hearing in Washington.

Armour and company of Illinois, Armour and company of Delaware; Armour and Morris and Company were named in the complaint.

The complaint stated that on December 30, J. Ogden Armour entered into a written contract with Morris and company to acquire all of its assets. In so doing, it was charged, parties to the contract violated the packers and stockyards act.

Would Create Monopoly.

Secretary Wallace claimed such acquistion would have the effect of restraining interstate commerce or of creating a monopoly in many sections of the United States in the purchase of livestock and in the shipment and sale of meat and other livestock products.

The complaint also charged that the contract would have the effect of manipulating or controlling prices.

The proposal first came to public notice early in November, when J. Ogden Armour and other officials of Armour and company conferred with Secretary Wallace. After conferences between Mr Wallace, President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty followed. It was announced that it had been agreed that there was no obligation on the part of the government to endorse or to acquiesce in the proposal.

Wallace Warns Armour.

Secretary Wallace declared today that early in December he told J. Ogden Armour and E. Edson White, now president of Armour and company, that he "did not think we could look with favor upon the transaction proposed and suggested that they should do nothing further with it."

Mr. Armour, he said, then remarked that they felt that it was necessary that they should complete the purchase in order to increase their volume of business and thus better be able to meet heavy overhead charges.

A week or so later, Mr. Wallace said, he again advised the Armour officials "that the best thing to do was to drop the whole matter, and before the conversation ended I told him plainly that if they should go ahead and consummate the purchase I should feel it my duty to issue a complaint, which very likely would be followed by an order to cease and desist, in order that a judicial decision might be obtained."

Says Police Are Ready to Arrest Remington Slayer

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 26.—The arrest of a suspect in the murder of Earle Remington, slain clubman and "society bootlegger," will be accomplished today, according to Detective Sergeant Herman Cline, who confidently stated that a man believed to be the slayer, will be in custody within a few hours.

Additional evidence was found in the case which indicates that Remington was engaged in an illicit whisky war with a rival bootlegger organization and it is believed by the police that he may have been slain by some member of his rival's gang. It was learned that Remington incurred the enmity of one of the biggest bootleggers in the business and one who had openly boasted of influence and "protection."

Bootlegger of Air Gets Away

(Associated Press.)

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 26. — A huge airplane circled over the municipal landing field yesterday. On the ground, with two occupants, stood a big touring car. The plane, after making a number of circles, gently glided to earth.

Behind a barn nearby four police and government officials watched. As the plane came to a stop the pilot unloaded a number of bundles which the men in the automobile began to transfer to the car.

The officers made a rush, but the air pilot was too quick. Starting his engine he soared away to the north, whence he came. In the gunny sacks the officers found several cases of liquor. The two occupants of the automobile were arrested. The car was confiscated.

Beushausen Proposes One House Legislature For Nebraska to Consist of 100 Members

Says Cost of Making Laws Under New Plan Would Be Only About Half as Much as Present System and Results Far Greater.

WOULD ELIMINATE PASSING THE BUCK

Solons Consider Hardin's Proposal For Constitutional Amendment Reducing House to Membership of 50 and Senate to 18.

While the house of representatives Monday morning had under consideration in committee of the whole H. R. 175, Hardin's proposed constitutional amendment reducing the house to a membership of 50 and the senate to 18 members, Beushausen offered an amendment providing for a unicameral, or one house legislature consisting of 100 members. Before the debate closed the committee arose and reported progress.

Hardin made an extended argument in favor of his resolution, which has two companion bills, one providing for four year terms for members of the legislature, half of whom would be elected each two years and the other for redistricting the state. He declared that to reduce representation as he proposed would save the taxpayers of the state $100,000 per session. He also said that with the smaller bodies only about one-third the number of bills would be introduced, but that these would be of more importance. In none of the more populous states, he said, is the representation as great as in Nebraska, the two houses in California having only 40 and 80 members respectively.

The proposed amendment was opposed by Dysart, Auten, Wilson of Dawes and others, Gordon moving to indefinitely postpone. Dysart called attention to the fact that a convention had lately spent three months revising the constitution and asserted that that instrument should not now be tampered with unless the necessity is plain. He was particularly oposed to cutting the membership of the senate to 18, where ten men could control and where legislation would be by buttonholing.

Auten asserted that the expense of the legislature is small, compared with the total taxes of the state. If the senate were reduced in membership to 18 vested interests would have far less trouble in controlling legislation, as it would be only necessary for them to work upon ten men. He favored keeping legislation as close to the people as possible, which was also the idea of Lundy.

In presenting his amendment for a one house body Beushausen declared that every argument that could be made in favor of the Hardin bills could be made for this one and more. The legislature would cost only about half as much as the present system and the results would be greater. There would be no passing the buck from one house to the other and each bill would be required to stand on its own merits. O'Gara spoke in the same vein.

Collins Again Beaten.

Collins Monday morning again offered his resolution prohibiting state officials and employes from lobbying on the floor of the house unless registered as lobbyists, and requiring such servants to attend strictly to the business for which they are employed. It was defeated by a very large vote. Gallahher asserted that he did not believe that the introducer of the resolution was sincere and Thatcher wanted it amended so as to include the names of those who were accused of lobbying. Broome moved to lay the resolution on the table and the motion carried.

On Educating Deaf.

A bill appropriating $8,000 to pay for the education of deaf children in the public schools occupied considerable of the time of the committee of the whole. It provides that where there are five or more such children in a district a teacher shall be employed to instruct them, a part of such expense to be paid from this state appropriation. It was explained that there is quite a large class of such pupils in the Prescott school in Lincoln and that they make splendid progress, this plan being less expensive than sending them to the school for deaf in Omaha and in addition gfiving them the benefit of home ties and touch. Green of Lancaster, sponsor for the bill, was not present while it was under consideration and as one of the members desired further explanation, it went over.

Adopt Dyball Resolution.

The house by practically unanimous vote adopted the Dyball resolution, which instructs the capitol commission to investigate cost and workings of voting machines for the legislature. It was stated by Mr. Dyball that under the present system it takes from six to seven minutes for a roll call, whereas with the machines but one minute would be required. The commission is to install the machins if found advisable after investigation.

Wymore to Vote On Bond Issue For New School

(Special to The Star.)

WYMORE, Neb., Feb. 26.—Citizens of Wymore will soon vote on a new high school building, which will be of the most modern type. The present building is obselete, and has become entirely inadequate to care for the present number of students, and additional buildings have been provided on the grounds, which cause extra heating, janitorship and trouble. Members of the board of education have recently made several trips to other cities in this part of the state to inspect school buildings and interview architects. It is probable that Lincoln architects will draw the definite plans in the near future, and that a building suitable for Wymore will cost in the neighborhood of $165,000 to $190,000.

SACRED CONCERT AT HIGH SCHOOL

Capacity Audience Enjoys Splendid Program By Vested Choir.

As usual, the Sunday Vesper concert given Sunday afternoon at the Lincoln high school auditorium under the direction of H. O. Ferguson, was a rousing success. The house was filled to capacity and an enthusiastic audience enjoyed a unique and delightful program presented by the Vested choir of the Grace Methodist church, assisted by an orchestra from the Lincoln Musicians' association.

Keenly impressive in their vestments, the choir gave one of the finest bits of choral interpretation that it has ever been the pleasure of a Lincoln audience to hear. Because of Lent, the program was made up of sacred numbers. Three of these, given by the choir without the orchestra were especially beautiful. Each individual gave his or her best and the result was a splendid ensemble of clear, sweet tones and delicate shading.

The contralto solo "He Shall Feed His Flock," Handel, sung by Frances Burgess-Vacik was unusually lovely. Mrs. Vacik has a delightfully warm and vibrant contralto voice and her interpretation of her number was exquisite.

There were several solo numbers in the second part of the program and also some quartet numbers as well as the chorus. The soloists were Bernice Bays, Exie Burgess, soprano; Francis Diers, tenor, E. C. Boehmer, bass.

The second division of the program was the Forty-sixth Psalm given with a musical setting by Dudley Buck. The music in itself is wonderful and it lost none of its beauty in the manner in which it was given Sunday afternoon. The enunciation of the choir was almost perfect which is something unusual in a group of fifty-one voices.

The program was as follows:

Palestrina ..... Gloria Patri.
Sanctus from Mass E flat..Farmer.
God Is My Guide.....Schubert.
By Babylon's Wave.....Gounod.
"He Shall Feed His Flock"—Handel—contralto solo Frances Burgess Vacik.
Souls of the Righteous.....Noble.
Emitte Spiritum Tuum ..Scheutky.
Music When Soft Voices Die..... Dickenson.

Part Two.

Forty-sixth Psalm....Dudley Buck.
God Is Our Refuge and Strength Chorus.
There is a River—soprano solo and double quartet.
The Heathen Raged—bass solo.
The Lord of Hosts is With Us.... Chorus.
O Come Hither—tenor solo.
Be Still Then, And Know—quartet and chorus.
The Lord of Hosts Is With Us, Amen—Chorus.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters

Musterole Works Without the Blister—Easier, Quicker.

There's no sense in mixing a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can easily relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, combined in the form of the present white ointment. It takes the place of mustard plasters, and will not blister.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia.) 35c and 65c, jars and tubes.

Better than a mustard plaster.—

MUSTEROLE WILL NOT BLISTER

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep your child's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle ,and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

This Offers You

what you'll be glad to know

A new-type tooth paste, based on modern research, has brought rich benefits to millions. Dentists the world over now advise its use. You see one of its results in glistening teeth wherever you look today.

This offers you a delightful test, to show what it means in your home.

The foe of film

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. No ordinary tooth paste can effectively combat it. So it clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Most tooth troubles, most dingy teeth, are due to that clinging film.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look cloudy. It forms the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

It was alarming

Tooth troubles due to film were constantly increasing. Very few escaped. The situation was alarming. So dental science sought for film combatants.

Research discovered two. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring. Able authorities proved those methods effective. Then a tooth paste was created, based on modern knowledge, and those two film combatants were embodied in it.

That tooth paste is called Pepsodent.

New protection

Pepsodent brings other new protection. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

In all these ways, Pepsodent is bringing to careful people of some 50 nations a new dental era.

No Cost

This test is free. See coupon.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

For beauty's sake

Men and women who want prettier teeth must fight that dingy film. People who want cleaner, safer teeth must combat it.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

What you see and feel will soon convince you. Cut out the coupon now.

ISOLATION RENOUNCED.

President Harding's message to the United States senate asking it to approve American participation in the permanent court of international justice is the boldest bit of statemanship which he has shown since assuming the responsibilities of office.

It is more significant than his proposals for disarmament.

It is of vastly greater importance to Europe and the world at large, for American participation in the permanent court of international justice holds a promise of something definite in the rehabilitation and stabilization of the world, while the disarmament conference was doomed to failure even before adjournment.

Withal the president's move smells very strongly of politics. One would like to attach a sincerity to it which the circumstances do not justify. The president asks the senate to approve American participation before the close of the present special session. There are only six days left before the new congress is formally sworn in and the members elected last November take their seats. With the senate very definitely committed to a hostile course with reference to the league of nations it seems hardly probable that it will look with very great favor on the proposal for American participation in the court of justice—a creation of the league and more or less inseparably connected with it. The natural conclusion is that the president has yielded to the insistent demand from within his official family, notably from Secretary of State Hughes and Secretary Hoover that America take some definite steps towards associating herself with other nations of the world in the program to outlaw future wars.

Better still it is not at all improbable that the president is desirous of retaining the friendship of Elihu Root, who is credited with doing more than any other man in working out the plan of the international court of justice and who, it is understood, has been insistently demanding that America become affiliated with it.

Mr. Harding can now look at those who have been demanding American participation in world affairs without shifting his eyes. He has put the question squarely to congress and has indicated a willingness to accept any reservations which the senate may see fit to add to protocol. He will be in a position to wipe his hands of further responsibility even though the 'irreconcilables' in the United States senate succeeded in defeating the proposal of American participation.

Should the senate accede to the president's request it would be a glorious vindication and triumph for those who led the league of nations' fight. No one, who has been keeping tab on political sentiment, will seriously question the statement that the president's decision to ask for American participation in the international court of justice is in recognition of the growing swing of sentiment favorable to American membership in the league of nations. The drift has been towards the league for over a year, and if it continues to gain momentum from now on, league adherents are hopeful that American participation in league affairs will be an accepted fact before another two years roll around.

The president is entitled to full credit for a courageous stand against what he knows to be the judgment of close and powerful friends. It was infinitely more incisive than anything else during his administration. It constitutes the first definite pronouncement of a foreign policy. Heretofore America has been drifting along the lines of least resistance. The president cuts loose from the doctrine of splendid isolation. He definitely renounces the views which have been placed in his mouth by Johnson, Norris and Brandegee. He is willing that America should play a part in world affairs. Even though ratification of the president's request is hardly to be expected, America should take note a new era has been inaugurated so far as this country's foreign policy is concerned. There is to be no more straddling—no more blowing warm and blowing cold. President Harding has ventured too far for that.

From now on America may expect Mr. Harding to formulate policies committing this country to an active participation in the affairs of the world.

THE NEW RELIGION.

Rudyard Kipling's famous allegorical poem on "Everra the maker of gods" is called to mind by some of the religious controversies now raging within the churches Everra was depicted as the spirit of dogmatic theology. He fashioned images of the deities which humankind has worshipped in different lands and eras of the world's history, and decreed to each nation that "This is the way in which gods shall be made.

And whoso makes them otherwise shall die."

In the end, the poet tells us, Everra himself died and found his way into Paradise, where the Creator of the universe warmly welcomed him as one who had given Him a vast amount of amusement as he looked down from the throne on high and saw the fantastic caricatures of divinity which Everra had wrought.

There are still earnest and devout people who insist that religion must conform to certain plans and specifications known as "creeds" and that whosoever fails to accept and believe these formulas of the future life will be damned forever.

Witness the call sent out by a number of reverend Christian gentlemen at Omaha for an organization of Bible believers who must accept, among other things, the reality and personality of Satan and "the endless punishment of the impenitent," presumably in the old-fashioned hell with its lake of fire and brimstone.

Between these sincere exponents of literal acceptance of the scriptures on the one side, and men like Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, who declare that the story of Adam and Eve is not true, or men like Rev. J. D. Buckner who claims that God never commanded the Jews to destroy witches and to exterminate men, women and children of the nations opposed to them in war, there is a difference of beliefs which it would seem impossible to reconcile.

Within the church itself a conflict of ideas is raging, and the indications are that modern liberalism is gaining ground even among the men of the pulpit. Everra, as typified by those who cling to the ancient forms of belief and reject all scientific discoveries which appear to conflict therewith, is likely to have fewer followers in the future than in the past.

CALLING THE BLUFF.

Governor Charles W. Bryan has rather effectually called the bluff of republican majorities in the legislature who so far have refused to follow the mandate of the voters in the November election to repeal the civil administrative code law.

The governor is carrying his fight to the people, who commissioned him by the largest vote ever given a gubernatorial candidate to wipe the code system from the statute books. While the legislature can so far point to the fact that the conspiracy among republican leaders to retain the code at any cost has succeeded, all of the advantage is with the governor. He has had a bill introduced for repeal. He has provided a constructive program of reorganization to return the government to the duly elected constitutional officers and the people who are responsible for their election. If the people are denied the relief for which they voted, the republican majorities in both branches of the legislature must assume responsibility.

But Governor Bryan is not willing to let it rest there. He is determined to make additional efforts to carry out the pledges which he made during the course of the campaign.

So the governor is asking those who believe in his program to assist him in putting it into effect. He wants members of the legislature to hear from the home folks.

Those who supported Mr. Bryan should write to their representatives in the legislature expressing their sentiments on the retention of the code. A shower of telegrams, letters and telephone messages may persuade the rather obstinate republican leaders that a mandate issued by a majority of the voters in a democracy cannot be lightly cast aside.

The time to write is now.

Do not delay.

Deflation is deflation the world over, and it makes no difference what the monetary system may be—industry in all lines and those dependent upon industry must suffer. That is the substance of a statement given out by the leading bankers of Great Britain, who are now vigorously attacking the government. In concert with the United States, the government agreed to a policy of deflation in Great Britain, the bankers point out. But while America is on the road to recovery, deflation is still being seriously felt in the British Isles. Every time trade gives promise to a revival, the bankers claim the government has taken steps to administer another knockout. Under such circumstances there is little reason for hope for early recovery.

COMMENT BY THE PRESS.

FOR POSTAL SAVINGS.

A bill to raise interest rates on deposits in postal savings banks from 2 to 3 per cent has been reported to the house by the postoffice committee. It appears to be a needed and logical movement for the stimulation of savings. There is little doubt that the government can afford to pay more than 2 per cent on such deposits. There may be some doubt as to the advisability of having the rate thus fixed by congress.

Demand for money and consequent interest rates in commercial enterprises fluctuate. It would appear to be good business to make some provision in the postal savings law which would allow the proper authorities to fix the interest rate with relation to general business conditions without having to go to congress for authority for each change. The law which established the postal savings banks fixed the interest rates at 2 per cent on deposits in 1910. In a period of great fluctuation of money values these rates, therefore, have been inflexible. The success of the department has been correspondingly handicapped. Such handicaps should be removed.

Postal savings banks supply an important demand in this country—the demand of small savers, particularly of foreign extraction, for absolute security for their savings. Through ignorance many savers have been exploited repeatedly by private banks and crooked investment solicitors. Great numbers of them do not trust any bank, but hide their savings, withdrawing the money from circulation. Most of these persons would trust the government to keep their funds. They should be encouraged to do so. A higher interest rate comparable to commercial rates though perhaps somewhat lower because of the better security, together with advertising and education, would serve that purpose. By making true savers who would profit directly from savings, this would serve a valuable economic and social purpose.

That there is an important section of the public already taking advantage of the postal savings opportunity is proved by the fact that these banks held more than $140,000,000 of deposits at the close of the last fiscal year. Thus was a reduction of approximately 15,000,000 from the previous year. That reduction probably means withdrawals in the hard times of 1921 for necessary expenses. It constitutes an argument for, rather than against, the postal savings system.

It is wise to stimulate an increase of such reserves. Higher interest rates will help to do that. Also the new bill's proposal to raise the limit of deposits from $2,500 to $3,000 is a wise step. We do not understand Secretary Mellon's objection to raising this limit to $5,000 on the ground that it might discourage investment in private business. The postal savings funds are redeposited by the government in commercial banks, protected by adequate security. These banks put it into circulation. It is not withdrawn from commerce. The system works to the advantage of all concerned. It appears to us that it would work still better if made more flexible and more attractive to savers —Chicago Tribune.

More Truth Than Poetry

"The little fool, she said, "need never
Come sadly sniveling to me;
My pity she has lost forever,
I hope she suffers wretchedly!
I care not if she stumbled blindly.
Her ignorance is no excuse;
She need not think that I will kindly Forget her playing fast and loose.

"I wouldn't lift my smallest finger
To put her in her former place;
She took the step, now let her linger—
The little hussy—in disgrace!
Oh, I could find it sweet to hear her
Appealing for a moldy crust;
No word of mine shall ever cheer her,
Though she come crawling in the dust!

"You need not waste your time in preaching
To me concerning Christian grace;
I'd spurn her if she came beseeching,
With tear drops rolling down her face
No matter if her step was taken
In youthful blindness, as you say,
My resolution can't be shaken;
She wouldn't see now let her pay!"

She heard the yelping of a pup
Whose foot was fastened in a trap;
With tender words she took it up,
And nursed it kindly in her lap;
She even let a tear or two
Ooze from her sympathetic eyes;
It's funny how some pups will do
Things that are neither safe nor wise.

A Bit of Homely Philosophy

KEEP MUM ON YOUR FAILURES.

You may think telling about some of your undertakings that were failures—will excuse you for not being in a better position today.

Irrespective of the fact that such failures may not have been due to lack of business foresight on your part, the fact that you were a loser, does not reflect creditably on you. Therefore it is unwise to give too much emphasis to your losses.

Really successful men don't enjoy hearing accounts of failures; they want to hear about successes and methods of successful men.

You will get more attention from such men if you have something bright and good and businesslike to offer for the future.

Stop living in the past.
It is a wrecking habit.
The future is the important time for you.
Talk and think of the future—and plan for it.
Forget the past. You need all your thinking power to help you in the present and the future.

THE GREATER LOVE

A New Romance by Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Author of Nation-Wide Reputation and Writer of Popular Novels and Short Stories.

CHAPTER CII.

It was with a sense of depression and weariness that Lang started back toward the little village of Southold, Sam Travers' car following him through the darkness and rain.

Lang had had his talk with the man who had stolen $900 of James Walsh's money, and it had been a hard ordeal.

A worse ordeal faced him. The talk with James Walsh himself.

Yet Victoria's happiness depended on keeping Sam Travers' deed a secret. The cashier and the president of the bank could be trusted to maintain silence if Lang asked them to, and if the money were refunded.

The money would be refunded. Kenneth Lang had Sam's written promise. Moreover, with the threat of jail over him, Travers would be afraid to play false. He was thoroughly terrified.

James Walsh might demand immediate restitution. In which case if Travers did not have the money—it must be forthcoming.

Kenneth Lang must get back to Saxville immediately. Walsh had gone away today. He would return home this evening. Unless too tired he might balance his bankbook tonight. But no, of course he would not. He would wait until tomorrow when he was in his office.

Perhaps he was in the habit of having his secretary balance his accounts for him!

Lang must talk with him before this was possible.

At Dr. Grant's Kenneth stopped his car, and, without waiting to speak to Travers, hurried up the steps. Victoria had been watching from the window and opened the front door for him.

"Where is Sam?" she asked.

"Waiting for you," he said.

"Mr. Hamilton is ready for you both."

"You will be a witness, won't you?" she besged, dropping her voice.

"I cannot, my dear," he replied "I must go right back to Saxville."

"Why?"

"Business.'

She shrugged her shoulders. "Business!" she scoffed. "It can wait!"

She did not understand the smile with which he looked at her.

"The business I refer to cannot wait," he said.

"What did you want to see Sam about?" she asked, suddenly remembering that it was for this that Kenneth had left her nearly an hour ago.

"Business also."

"Anything connected with our marriage?" she demanded.

"To a certain extent," he evaded. "You see, I know Mr. Hamilton, and I wanted to be sure that everything was all right—that he was at home, and all that."

Victoria raised her face to his, and, as once before, kissed him.

"Bless you, Ken!" she exclaimed. "You are the dandiest friend ever! The idea of your going to all that trouble for me! By the way, you have not yet told me why you came to Southold in all this storm."

"Business again!" he tried to laugh. "Ah, here is Travers!" as Sam came up the steps.

"I am nearly ready, Sam!" Victoria told her lover. "I wonder where Miss Grant is? She disappeared somewhere just after you left, Ken, and I have not seen her since. Miss Grant!" raising her voice.

A door opened and Ruth's footsteps sounded in the upper hall. Kenneth knew they came from the direction of the room he had occupied through the weeks of his illness.

"I am coming!" Ruth said, as she ran downstairs. "Pardon me leaving you so long, Miss Walsh. But I had some little business to attend to this evening."

Victoria laughed loudly. "I declare! Never have I seen such business-like folks in my life! Kenneth, here tells me he came all the way from Saxville in this storm on 'business.' And now you say that 'business' has kept you upstairs all this time!

"I just called you to thank you for harboring the drowning travelers and to tell you that Sam—my brother—and I are going away now. May I kiss you goodbye?"

Ruth's pale cheek did not flush at the question.

"Yes," she said simply. "Goodbye."

Victoria paused for an instant, then impulsively,—

"Wish me luck, won't you, Miss Grant?" she begged.

"Certainly!" Ruth rejoined. "I wish you luck—and happiness."

"Good night and thanks! Travers said, holding out his hand to his hostess. "You've been awfully white to us, really!"

"We did nothing," she said. "I hope you and your sister will be none the worse for your wetting.

"You are going now?" turning to Kenneth as the pair descended the front steps.

"Yes," he said, "I am going in a minute."

Water Power Development.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 26.

To the Editor of The Lincoln Star:

The state of Nebraska is about 400 miles long and about 180 miles wide, having an area of about 77,000 square miles without any coal mines and practically without any fuel.

The coal mining business of the country is a very bad business for the miners and for the owners of the mines. The demand for coal from the first of May to October each year is very small and the miners, employes and owners of the mines are mostly out of employment during the five months, May to October. So during the seven months, October 1st to May 1st the miners and all the employes in and around the mines have to receive nearly double pay and the consumers of coal have to pay for this great waste which amounts to millions of dollars each year for the consumer of coal in Nebraska.

While the Nebraska consumers are paying millions of dollars per year for light, heat and power, there are rivers and streams in Nebraska, which, if properly harnessed, could and would furnish more than 1,850,000 horse power of 80 per cent efficiency.

The Platte river from Scottsbluff to Plattsmouth, about four hundred miles, has a fall or drop of three thousand feet and by impounding and storing the flood waters and surplus waters which could be done without a prohibitive expense, an average drop or fall of 5000 cubic feet of water per second could be maintained.

A drop or fall of 5,000 cubic feet of water per second for 3,000 feet would produce more than 1,250,000 horse power of 80 per cent efficiency.

The other streams and rivers of the state if properly harnessed, would furnish at least 600,000 horse power of 80 per cent efficiency, making a total of 1,850,000 horse power of 80 per cent efficiency in the state of Nebraska.

It is generally expressed and considered over the state that the Platte river cannot be controlled without an expenditure that would be prohibitive. I think it can be controlled by a system of what I call flood pockets.

In order to explain just how these flood pockets would control the flood, I will locate at one or two points along the river one of the flood pockets. The first one I would locate at a point a short distance above Ashland will call is power plant station No. 1. The flood pocket would be about five miles long and one mile wide. Looking up stream, the right hand side of the flood pocket would miles. Across the lower end of the flood pocket there would be an embankment or dam one mile long and about thirty-three feet high above the low water levels of the Platte river for five river, on the two sides of the flood pocket the embankment would be five miles long and thirty-three feet high at the lower ends and about eight feet high at the upper end. The upper end of the flood pocket would border on the Platte river for five be open one mile across and would be shaped up in such a way as to let the waters of the river run into the flood pocket until it filled; when filled the waters would flow down the main channel of the river.

The fall or drop in the five miles of the Platte river is about five feet to the mile, making a total of twenty-five feet in the flood pocket. So the water would be twenty-five feet deep at the lower end of the flood pocket and about zero at the upper end.

The floods and the ordinary flow of the river would go down the main channel of the river as long as the flood pockets was full. Whenever the power plant or other openings were taking water at the lower end of the flood pocket the floods and the flow of the river will go into the flood pocket until it is full. Whenever the flood pocket is full all the water of the river will go down the main channel of the river.

Having explained the flood pocket lets see what benefit we are going to derive from it. We have impounded in the flood pocket a body of water five miles long and one mile wide, having a depth of twenty-five feet at the lower end of the pocket and no depth at the upper. Locate a power plant at the lower end of the flood pocket having a capacity to use 10,000 cubic feet of water per second. This 10,000 cubic feet has a drop or fall of twenty-five. A fall of twenty-five feet of 10,000 cubic feet of water per second would generate 22,700 horse power of 80 per cent efficiency. This 22,700 horse power reduced to kilowats would make 17,000 kilowats per hour and for one day of twenty-four hours there would be produced 408,000 kilowats.

For domestic purposes these kilowats can be delivered 100 miles in every direction from the plant for less than two cents per kilowat.

The second location that I will select for the flood pocket of the water power district No. 2, will be a short distance above Central City. The flood pocket will be about five and one-half miles long and one mile wide. The fall in the river is about seven and on-half feet to the mile, making an elevation of water in the lower end of the flood pocket of forty feet and at the upper end, no depth.

The embankment or dam across the one mile at the lower end of the flood pocket would be 48 feet high above the lower water level of the Platte river. The two side embankments five and one-half miles long would be forty-eight feet high at the lower end of the flood pocket and about eight feet high at the upper end. This eight feet at the top of the embankment is to make the flood pocket perfectly safe. Objections are made as to the width of the flood pockets on account of the wind and the waves. The flood pockets can be narrowed down in width so that the wind and the waves can have no harmful effect.

Place a power plant in the lower end of the flood pocket having a capacity to use 5,000 cubic feet of water per second. A drop or fall of 5,000 cubic feet of water for 40 feet would produce 18,180 horse power of 80 per cent. This 18,180 horse power reduced to kilowats would make 13,635 kilowats per hour and for one day of twenty-four hours, 327,240 kilowats. These kilowats can be delivered long distances for less than two cents per kilowat.

The legislature at this session should pass a law that would enable water power districts to develop the waters of the state.

There are no politics in this question as both parties in the state convention resolved to develope the water powers of the state as follows:

August 16, 1922.

Democrats: We favor water power development under state control to furnish light, heat and power, at the lowest cost to the people.

Republicans: "We favor the development of water power district legislation to the end of rendering possible the development of water power by and for the benefit of the public."

There is not a place in this country where you can find as favorable conditions to develope water power as in Nebraska. The three Loup rivers hav an average fall of about eight feet to the mile and by the use of flood pockets a large amount of power could be obtained. The Niobrara river about 300 miles long has a fall averaging about nine feet to the mile. The Platte river four hundred miles long with an average fall of seven feet per mile. The Missouri river borders on Nebraska for more than two hundred and fifty miles and has a fall of about nine inches to the mile.

Good Supply of Water at Hardy

(Special to The Star.)

HARDY, Neb., Feb. 26—The Burlington civil engineers who are drilling the company well here deeper, struck a very good vein of water after they had drilled only two days. The original well, dug in 1893, was only twenty-five feet deep, and while it formerly supplied all the water needed, it had become unequal to the occasion in recent years with the advent of the larger engines and heavy tonnage trains. The drillers went through sixteen feet of coarse gravel and stopped on top of blue shale. The total depth of the well is only forty-one feet now, and it is expected that a plentiful supply of water will be had. At Hubbell, just east of here, the game drillers went down 325 feet before striking a sufficient supply of water and then it went into a salt water. The explanation for so good a shallow well here is the location on the Republican river valley.

Booth to Dedicate Church at Aurora

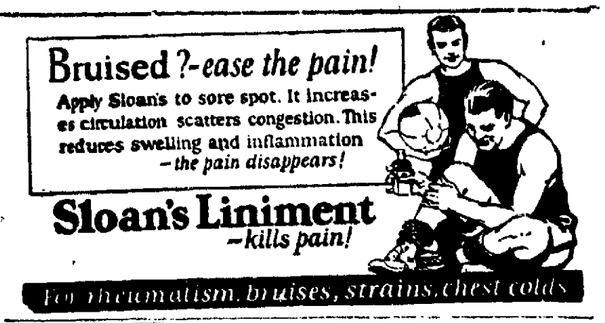

(Special to The Star.)

AURORA, Neb., Feb. 26—John Booth, secretary of the erection division of the church extension board of the Christian church will dedicate the new Christian church here March 18. He is counted one of the great platform men of the Christian church and the local church is delighted in securing his services. By Saturday of this week, the contractor and his men will be through and the following week will see the pews fitted and the carpets laid. Rev. C. C. Dobbs intends to invite every Christian church in Nebraska to send a representative to this dedication.

The Eternal Eve

(Copyright, 1923, by May Christie.)

BY MAY CHRISTIE.

A Baffling Man.

Eve stared in bewildered fashion. For a moment it seemed to her as though she had scarcely heard aright.

"A lucky man—to whom I gave my love—" she repeated blankly.

Wilfred nodded.

"He no longer connects me with his future," she told herself, with an odd little contraction of the heart. But aloud she merely said, in a voice she hoped was equally detached:

"Indeed you flatter me!"

The sarcastic intonation was not lost upon the other.

"Upon the contrary—I have the reputation of being extraordinarily blunt!"

"There are men in this world who are capable of talking absolute truth to you, though perhaps—up to the present—you haven't met them," he went on evenly. "There are also men with will-power so strong that even you—even you would fail to turn them from their course."

Eve flushed. In that inquisitive, restless brain of hers she was wondering desperately if this were meant in compliment or in disparagement.

When she spoke it was in a cold little voice that was intended to freeze this impertinent young man.

"The ways of men don't interest me, nor have I any ambition to turn them from their course. "To tell the truth," she added, with an almost comical little air of dignity. "I find the majority of men impossibly boring!"

"Oh, no, that isn't true!" He sat up suddenly. "You're much too vivid and awake for that. Why not be frank?"

"How—how can you!" she began stammering.

"You may think that I'm transgressing all the laws of politeness," went on the attractive voice beside her, "but don't you know that I too can study character as well as yourself? Did you never think that one reason for my avoidance of so-called 'society' might be—pretty women?"

"The topic didn't interest me," remarked the girl.

But the other continued resolutely.

"We aren't blind we men, although I will admit the majority of us are fools! Take your own case for instance." He laid a compelling hand on Eve's arm and gently forced her back into her chair. "If you succeeded in making an impression on me—mind, I don't say whether you have or haven't—what would it not be in the case of other men?"

Eve tried to speak, but her lips felt unaccountably dry and parched.

And he went on.

"I sit here looking at you wondering over the long, long trail of men who have lost their heads about you, trying to analyze your attraction and almost wanting to write you down as cruel in my mind."

"Why—cruel?" whispered she.

"Perhaps for self-protection—perhaps because it is t... truth" came the disconcerting answer.

Then he added reflectively

"I shouldn't say that you were 'experimental,' rather."

"What—what do you mean?"

He puffed at his cigar before he spoke again.

"You've got the gambler's instinct, like so many pretty women," he resumed at last, "only the game is Life, not cards." He flung a critical glance at her. "With a trump hand such as yours, you couldn't resist the temptation of a plunge! The Eternal Eve personified!"

"A trump hand!" repeated the girl mechanically.

The other nodded.

"All the leading cards ... I enumerate them," he said smiling an odd little smile and looking intently at her. "Here goes then. First there's Beauty. Men fall for that. Only you've wit enough to know there must be something back of it. Next there comes Sympathy. Oh, you're surprised that I give it second place! But I do. It's more important than brains. We won't call it sympathy—but 'Playing Up.' Its enormously essential. I should judge you've always 'played up' well."

He broke off for a moment.

"Next to the quality of Sympathy, you've got Good Brains," went on the tranquil voice. "You're fresh—original—amusing."

"You flatter me," said Eve again ironically, the cold pain gripping tighter at her heart. There had been no hint of love.

"I've omitted the most important thing of all—the one that knocks all the others on the head—I mean, that makes them negligible," resumed the airman slowly. "It's a kind of personal magnetism that hangs about you. It's just a kind of superabundant vitality and good health—high spirits, if you like—but men fall for it at once."

"What a splendid man-trap I must be!" said Eve, her little head held up defiantly, but with resentment in her heart.

"It's not a pretty word—but I should say it's rather near the truth!" came back the answer.

"Oh, a kind of flypaper where the flies come nibbling!" went on the incensed young woman. "What a perfectly delightful mission in life!"

He wheeled round on her.

"You've nearly always found it so!" he said abruptly. "Certainly you've filled the bill."

A pause. The rain was pouring down outside, but to Eve the sound of it was no longer kindly.

She could not sit there silent thinking. They had so little time together. If only she could make one desperate bid for happiness.

"You said something about the 'long, long trail of men who'—"

"Who lost their heads over you?" supplemented the other quietly. "Well, haven't they? Isn't it true?"

She did not answer.

Her companion asked abruptly:

"How many men, for instance, have wanted to marry you in the last few years?"

"An awful lot of men—I'd hate to tell you just how many!" she said slowly, all her gay air of independence gone.

Then suddenly she remembered Mary's words anent a woman's 'consciousness of charm.' Even a plain woman's granted she had self-assurance could succeed.

She plucked up spirit.

"You men are just like sheep anyhow," she said coolly. "You love to pay attention to the girl that other men admire. It's the old proverb over again—Nothing succeeds like success."

"The success may be inglorious"—hazarded the other.

"Granted," said Eve tartly. "Men being what they are!"

The airman smiled.

"I daresay I'm a bit old-fashioned." He poked the fire abstractedly. "And primitive! If I'd a girl of my own I'd want to keep her all to myself!"

"That's merely masculine vanity." He turned and smiled at her.

"Perhaps? And yet—I don't know—I guess I would be awfully fond of some one!"

"You're not logical," said Eve. "You like the things that other men admire—and yet you pretend to despise the girls who have those qualities! You've got some kind of ideal in your mind—yet you want her to be ... forlorn wallflower—an Adamless Eve."—

"Is her name Eve?" inquired the airman, amused.

The khaki-clad young lady flushed.

"Speaking impersonally — she began.

"That would be impossible with you." He moved a little nearer to her.

But Eve drew back, her acute mind reverting to an earlier part of the conversation.

"Since you have such an extraordinarily poor opinion of me, why did you say that the man to whom I gave my love would be so lucky?" she inquired. A direct challenge was ... ten on her face.

"Because he would ... quick answer. "Falling in love would change you very much."

"In what way?"

He smiled indulgently ... as though she were a child.

"Oh, lots of ways. Give ... alliance, poise, ... reason for existence. Stop all that feverish running after false gods. Yes, love's a curious thing—"

"You seem to know a lot about it." Her level gaze met his.

"I have ... wish to play the r... of s... The—"

"Why don't you go back to the ... unknown women with their ... tainess and honesty and wearable qualities?"

Capt. Roscommon touched her hand as though he vaguely wished to apologize, then drew it back again, and for a moment stared moodily into the glowing fire.

Then, flinging away the stump of his cigar, he ground it carefully with his heel into his hearthstone and said slowly.

"There's something that I want to tell you, Miss Eve. I'm a simple, primitive sort of fellow—but, believe me, I haven't any wish to hurt you. I'll tell it to you in an indefinite kind of way and get it off my chest."

"Over here in England I met some one I—I liked most awfully much. Too much!" said Wilfred. "I won't say who she is beyond the fact that you—well—you know her pretty well. I behaved like most men in those circumstances—lost my head a bit"—

"Yes, please go on," said Eve.

The other gave a cheery smile.

"I found my head again, that's all," he said.

Silence in the room. The girl turned abruptly to a little heap of wood beside her chair and carefully placed some scraps of logs upon the fire.

She hoped he did not see her face.

"You didn't care for her then, after all?" Her laugh was so well done that it sounded almost natural.

"I won't say that. Only—circumstances altered things!"

"Such as?"—

"Oh, too many others in the field!" He narrowed his eyes as he stared up at an odd sporting print that adorned the wall.

"The man in the story wasn't a real sportsman if he couldn't take a fence or two!" she observed with sudden spirit.

"There was one big fence he shied at"—

"Yes?"

"He cared for her unselfishly—at least he tried to. And he cared for her happiness more than for his own." The young man swung round in his chair, and a curious light was in his eyes as he regarded Eve.

But a great load seemed to be pressing intolerably on that young woman's heart.

"You—you didn't tell me—if this girl cared at all?" It seemed to her as though another voice was speaking, not her own.

"There was a time," he said deliberately, "a happy, idiotic wonderful time, when it seemed as though she did care"—He broke off, fumbling with an unlit cigar.

"And then?"

"And then the fool awoke to the impossibility of it all," he went on lightly, "for how would he compete with men who had money, position?"

"Perhaps the girl didn't care for money?" hazarded Eve a little tremulously. "Perhaps"—

He silenced her with a small, commanding gesture, and a short, rather bitter laugh.

"This isn't the girl's affair—it's mine," he said in his old, masterful way.

"You—you might—break her heart." The words came very low. "It takes—two—to play those games."

Silence again in the room. Moodily he stared into the fire. Was she only playing with him? Was she not the fiancee of a rich, eligible man?

He wasn't going to be made a fool of a second time. And yet she was so attractive, so lovable!

A man was a fool who allowed his heart to rule his head. No possible happiness could lie that way.

She was amusing herself, there could be no doubt of it. He was a new type to her.

He rose to his feet with a short, half-amused laugh.

"Guess I'll be getting over to the railway station," he said, then added briefly:

"Please don't worry about the young woman in my story—I've written 'finis' after it—and anyhow 'she' hadn't got a heart that could be broken!"

Minerva's Mail

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

A Happy Couple.

Dear Minerva: I started reading your Mail a year ago when I had a girl helping me whose first query in the morning was: "Did you read Minerva's Mail last night?" I read it occasionally many years ago but the letters all sounded so foolish—married folks wishing they were not married, others wishing they were, etc. I thought then they were all made-up letters. But I've been married now six years and have three children and I can see how easily discord could come into married life. I met my husband during my senior year at a small college and in a few years we were engaged and two years later married. We have many college friends married and as far as we know none even wish for a divorce and I think we are the happiest of all.

In a small school you have every chance to become acquainted, first with each other, and second when not with each other. For certainly each should know how the other occupies his or her time when not together. I feel sorry for university students or city students who have no interests or conversation except about hops, theatres, and scandals. How different the college days in a small community where we had a grove-covered campus, a brisk jaunt up to the river, camp fires and outdoor cooked meals, paddling to landing and another brisk walk home.

But to come to my subject: Happy and contented husbands and wives. The first thing to remember is we loved each other or we would not have married. Also I'd rather bite my tongue than nag.

Of course things irritate you when you are in a hurry. Of course you must become adjusted to new conditions. Perhaps it is the pocket book. One salary to keep two and a home, coal, telephone, lights and a lot of other monthly bills that we never thought of when we talked about the landlord being a robber. Little things the other one does will grate on your nerves if you let them. And then you snap out something cranky and there it goes. Shall I tell you what irritated me most in my husband our first year? Perhaps you'll think it silly. He used the stiffest, stiff toothbrush getable and brushed his teeth very little in the morning only. And I brushed mine religiously twice a day with a medium brush.

A trivial thing. But say were your first troubles any bigger?

Remember you loved each other and promised to stand by each other and you meant it.

Another thing. My husband and I vowed to each other that we will never interfere with each other when disciplining the children. And that our children will never hear

Entry List for State Basket Carnival Already Tops 200 Mark

ENTRIES ROLL IN FOR HI TOURNEY

More Than Two Hundred Cage Teams Already in Line For State Carnival.

More than two hundred high school teams have entered the the Nebraska high school basketball tournament which will be held at Lincoln, March 8, 9, 10, according to anouncement made Monday morning from the office of W. G. Brooks, secretary of the high school control board.

Entries closed at midnight Saturday and Monday morning 208 entries had been received and more were expected in the Monday afternoon and Tuesday mails.

BY GREGG M'BRIDE.

High school basketball fans were treated to many surprises last week. Matched games, county tournaments and sectional tournaments vie with each other in upsetting the basketball dope bucket in interscholastic circles.

Harvard high turned in one of the biggest surpdises when Coach Melville Taylor's tossers walked off with the Clay county tourney. Harvard defeated Sutton, 1922 state champion, in the championship game and turned the trick by a 21 to 13 point margin. Harvard scored ten points right off the bat and Sutton never was able to gain the lead. It was the second time in two weeks that Harvard had defeated Sutton, the Knapple cagers having won one from Harvard earlier in the season.

Sutherland's First Defeat.

Sutherland bid for a place in the spotlight last Wednesday by defeating North Platte, 26 to 24. The Platters, prior to the Sutherland game, had a record of nine straight victories. The Sutherland lads however, met defeat at Paxton Saturday night in a warm cage battle, 19 to 18.

Norfolk, Bloomfield Winnebago and Creighton had been picked to win the Wayne tourney. Bloomfield lost out in the first round; Winnebago and Creighton dropped out a little later, and Wayne copped the honors by defeating Norfolk. The Wayne five weathered the tournament by winning two exciting games. A basket by Sundo in the last minute play enabled Wayne to defeat the Winnebago Indians, 11 to 13. Reed's basket in the last 40 seconds of play gave Wayne a 14 to 12 victory over Norfolk. Ponca won class B and Belden took class C.

Gretna Upset Dope

Peru Prep was believed to have the edge in the Peru Normal meet. Gretna high grabbed the bacon by defeating Prep in the final game, 15 to 14. Dunbar copped the class C laurels.

The Chadron Normal tourney attracted an aggregation of fast western Nebraska teams. Sidney won first honors by defeating Alliance in the championship game, 17 to 13. The speed flashed by the Sidney quintet on the Chadron court should make it eligible for class A consideration at tournament time.

Sidney also eliminated the fast Valentine team, 24 to 16. Nebraska teams made a splendid showing in the tournament, the Husker quintets composing the entire final card on the closing day.

Stockham Wins York Tourney.

Stockham won the York tourney by defeating David City for the title, 21 to 18. Nelson won the Nuckolls county tournament by defeating Hardy in the final game.

Kenesaw won the Holdrege basketball tournament by winning from Bladen in the final contest, 31 to 22. Wilcox won the class B cup.

Hastings and Fremont teams suffered by road trips the past week. Fremont defeated Arlington at home, 55 to 23, but was walloped by Lincoln and University Place on foreign floors. Hastings dropped games at Plattsmouth and Omaha Tech.

Nebraska City defeated Plattsmouth, 26 to 19. Pawnee City won from Auburn, 26 to 16. Central defeated Omaha Tech, 24 to 14.

Newman Grove Hi Wins Over Elgin

(Special to The Star.)

NEWMAN GROVE, Neb., Feb. 26.—Friday was a gala day at Newman Grove high school. The Newman Grove boys defeated Elgin in basketball, 29 to 10. A carnival followed and more than $200 was raised to send the Newman Grove high school basketball team to the state tournament at Lincoln March 8, 9, 10.

The Newman Grove tossers started the game by rushing Elgin and piled up a 9 to 1 lead during the first half. Elgin made a better showing during the second period, but the locals came through with a 29 to 10 victory.

The Elgin girls defeated the Newman Grove girls, 22 to 20.

Otoe Defeats Talmage.

OTOE, Neb., Feb. 26.—The Otoe high basketball team journeyed to Talmage last Friday and defeated the Talmage high basketeers, 11 to 6.

HUSKERS SAY NAY TO WESTERN TRIP

Nebraska Declines Invitation to Play Football at Los Angeles.

The University of Nebraska athletic department has declined an invitation, extended by the University of Southern California, to pit the Cornhuskers against the Trojans of U. S. C. in a football game at Los Angeles, Saturday, December 8. The California invitation was received several weeks ago and, after consideration by a faculty committee at the university, formal announcement was made today that the Trojans' bid had been declined.

Los Angeles is completing a municipal stadium, the seating capacity of which is 100,000, and the U. S. C. athletic management planned to formally dedicate the structure by staging a Cornhusker-Trojan football game. Nebraska, it was explained in newspaper dispatches from the western coast, was invited because of its impressive record during the season of 1922, when the Cornhuskers won the Missouri Valley conference title and rounded out their campaign by defeating Notre Dame.

Long Absence From School.

Decision of the faculty committee in declining the invitation was due chiefly to the fact that a trip to Los Angeles early in December would involve nearly two weeks' absence from school by the Nebraska football men. Still another factor was the Missouri Valley conference rule which restricts each conference team to eight games during a single season. This rule would make it necessary for Nebraska to procure special permission from the conference to make the Los Angeles trip.

University of Southern California, ranked second in the Pacific coast conference football last fall. In the New Year's classic at Pasadena, the Trojans defeated Hugh Bezdek's Penn State college team.

Official Announcement.

"Director Dawson has received a formal invitation from E. C. Henderson, football coach and athletic director at the University of Southern California, for a game of football on December 8. Mr. Dawson took up the proposition with the faculty committee, but the latter turned it down because of the large amount of time that would have to be taken out of school work for the trip. Another point in connection with the proposed trip was the fact that there is a ruling in the Missouri Valley conference against playing more than eight games. And even if the faculty had countenanced the trip, permission would have had to be obtained from the Missouri Valley conference. Under the conditions it was deemed inadvisable to take it up at all with the conference."

TRAPSHOTS MEET IN TROPHY MATCH

HOLDREGE, Neb. Feb 26—Trapshooting fans of Nebraska are taking keen interest in the special match dated for Tuesday afternoon, March 6, at Holdrege in which Loren Bunney of Atlanta, Neb., holder of the western Nebraska championship diamond trophy, will defend his title in a 100-target contest with the challenger, Howard ("Smoky") Kerr of Ansley, Neb. The Bunney-Kerr shoot is to get under way at 2 p. m. on the Holdrege Gun club grounds and admission will be free to all.

Other events are on the program for that day, as trap experts from Elwood, Bartley, Beaver City, Ansley, Kearney and other Nebraska towns will be here with guns, ammunition and entrance money, all prepared to make it a day of real trapshooting.

Bunney and Kerr are two of Nebraska's most expert trapshots. Bunney won the diamond trophy last year. During the 1922 campaign he broke 1,575 of 1,650 targets for an average of 95.45, while Kerr's record last season was 991 hits at 1,050 targets, an average of 94.38.

Jim Varney, also of Ansley, has challenged the winner of the Bunney-Kerr match. If successful in defending the trophy, Bunney will compete with Varney in an April match on the Holdrege grounds.

The diamond trophy was presented to the shooters of western Nebraska by the State Sportsmen's association and was first competed for at the state shoot in 1922, L. E. Edwards of Bartley was winner. Mr. Edwards and C. C. Tappen of Hoagland were tied, after each had broken one hundred straight targets. In the shoot-off Edwards broke twenty in a row, to eighteen hits by Tappen, and the Bartley man walked off with the prize.

HARVARD HI TEAM COUNTY CHAMPION

Sutton High on Losing End of Final Game at Clay Center Tournament.

(Special to The Star.)

CLAY CENTER, Neb., Feb. 26.—Harvard high school captured first honors in the annual Clay county basketball tournament held here last week. Harvard won the title by defeating the Sutton state champions in the final game, 21 to 13, Saturday night. It was the second victory in two weeks which Harvard has scored over the Sutton high.

Harvard started off with a rush, scoring ten points before Sutton counted a basket. Though Sutton displayed an excellent brand of floor work, the state champs of 1922 were never able to grab the lead Harvard was in front at half-time, 13 to 6.

Hachtel led the scoring for Harvard with five field goals while Schwarz featured the Sutton play with three bskets and a free throw. Harvard recently defeated Sutton, 15 to 11, in a game played on the Harvard court, while Sutton won from Harvard in the opening game of the season. CHRISTOPHER BRAMBLE, of Brooklyn, Retired Chief Quartermaster U. S. Navy, who says his determination to try Tanlac was the wisest decision he ever made as the medicine completely restored his health.

"I'll stand by Tanlac to the very last," declared Mr. Bramble, "for it has helped me back on my feet and I am feeling like a new man now. I had suffered from stomach trouble for two years and was in an awful run-down condition. My appetite went back on me and when I did eat a little something I would suffer pain and misery for hours. My nerves were all out of fix. I would lie awake tossing and rolling until almost day, and I felt weak and tired all the time. I had no energy to do anything and just felt any way but right.

"Well, I just kept on losing weight and getting worse until I concluded to try Tanlac, and that was the wisest decision I ever made. It's the only medicine I ever saw that does all they say it will. I now eat three hearty meals a day and never feel a touch of indigestion, and my appetite was never better, even when I was a school boy. My sleep is sound and restful and I get up mornings feeling refreshed and fine. My weight has increased and I have been built up until I never felt better in my life. If anybody doubts this statement just let them see me."

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.

..Higher call and the time money rates had a depressing effect on the prices of most stocks in today's market although there were intervals of strength in a number of the steel and railroad shares. The usual month end profit taking combined with more extensive short selling as a result of the raising of the local reserve discount rate also were factors in the impairment of quoted values. Sales approximated 1,050,000 shares.

Opening prices in today's stock market were irregular, but the main tendency continued upward. Good buying power was noted in such dividend paying rails as New York Central, Atchison, New Orleans, Texas & Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred, all of which moved to higher ground with such industrial favorites as United States Steel common, American Woolen and Studebaker. Delaware & Hudson, selling ex-dividend 2¼ per cent, recovered the dividend on the first sale. Chemical shares were heavy.

Atlantic Coast Line advanced 2 points to 127, a new top, and then dropped back 1½. New Orleans, Texas & Mexico extended its gain to 1¼ points, and Northern Pacific and Union Pacific moved fractionally. Maxwell Motors A jumped 2⅛ points and Stromberg 1. Eastman Kodak gained 1½ points. There were a few conspicuous weak spots, notably Royal Dutch, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, and Nash Motors, all off 1 to 1½ points. Foreign exchanges opened easier, demand sterling selling at $4.69¾, off ½ a cent, and French francs dropping 3 points to 6.05.

Liquidation of the oil, chemical and food shares was counteracted for a time by the support extended to the steels and dividend paying rails, many of which advanced 1 to 2 points. Marking up of the call money rate to 5½ per cent, the highest renewal rate this year, and higher rates for time money resulted, however, in a way of selling orders and prices generally began to crumble before noon. Baldwin, American Can, North American, Chandler, Louisville & Nashville, Cuba Cane Sugar, preferred, Houston Oil and Royal Dutch, yielded readily to selling pressure, the losses ranging from 1 to 3 points.

Sales by discouraged holders and operations on the short side of the market put the level of prices considerably lower in the afternoon, even the railroad investments and steels turning heavy. Liggett & Myers dropped 7 points, Otis Elevator 5, Associated Oil 3 and Baldwin, Corn Products, General Asphalt, Coca Cola, American Ice, Atlantic Coast Line, American Smelting, Crucible Steel and Porto Rican Tobacco 2 to 2½.

The closing was irregular. Prices of most stocks continued heavy during the afternoon, Louisville & Nashville dropping 6½ points. Steels, however, were bid up sharply in the final hour when the call money rate dropped to 4¾ per cent.

New York Sugar

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.

SUGAR—The raw sugar market was easier early today and prices were ¼c lower with Cubas quoted at 6⅛c cost and freight, equal to 7.16 for centrifugal. There were sales of 75,000 bags of cubas to refiners.

The further reaction in the raw market led to renewed general selling in the early operations in raw sugar futures, with prices declining 9 to 23 points for active positions. After the early selling movement had subsided, however, there was a sharp rally on covering and buying by trade interests with midday prices 8 to 10 points net lower.

There were no changes in refined sugar with fine granulated listed at 8.75@9.00, but buyers were apparently more cautious and while there was a fair inquiry noted the demand did not seem to be quite so active.

Refined futures nominal.

Futures closed easy; approximate sales 30,000 tons. March $5.10; May, $5.22; July, $5.32; September, $5.41.

GRAIN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 26.

WHEAT—Liberal selling of May delivery had a bearish effect on the whole wheat market today during the early dealings. Houses with eastern connections were the chief sellers. Bears emphasized the view that there was a superabundance of supplies with Argentina, world's markets. The opening, which ranged from ⅛ to ⅜c lower, May $1.17⅛@1.17½, July $1.13⅝@1.13¾, was followed by a moderate further setback.

Shorts were buyers on the decline and 500,000 bushels were said to have been purchased for Europe. Rallies, however, lacked force. The close was unsettled, ¼ to 1⅛c net lower, with May $1.17¼@1.17⅜ and July $1.13⅝@1.13⅞.

CORN—Increasing receipts weakened corn and oats. After opening unchanged to ¼c lower, May 74¼@74¼c, the corn market continued to sag.

Later the market recovered somewhat with wheat. The close was unsettled at ⅛ to ⅜c net decline, May 73¾@73⅝c.

OATS—Oats started ⅛c off to ⅛c up, May 44¼@44⅝c, and later showed losses for all the active months.

PROVISIONS—Provisions were easier with grain despite steadiness in hog values.

MINERVA'S MAIL

their parents, nor see their parents cross with each other. Save it and thrash it out when the kiddies are away. It works; you try it. Of course you'll flare up sometime. But if you'll just remember to bite your tongue where you bit it before, you'll postpone that sharp word. And when you've been married six years, as we have, and succeeded, your tongue will be just about healed. You cannot see the faults then.—A CONTENTED WIFE.

Worried About Girl.

Dear Minerva: I am very much amused at the troubles of some of the people who write to you. Now, however, I am having troubles of my own and am turning to you for advice.

I am engaged to a girl that of course I thought the world of, and whom I supposed returned my love. However we have been having a great deal of trouble lately because she insists upon dating with some of the young men in the town where she is teaching.

Now Minerva I am sure that I am broad-minded and liberal enough to realize that a school teacher should have some recreation after her tedious day's work of pouring knowledge into the heads of youngsters who do not want to be instructed. And I would voice no objection whatever if occasionally she sought the company of some dependable young man to take her to an entertainment. Reports have been coming to me through reliable sources, however that she has been "stepping out" four or five nights a week with young men of the "wild set" of the town. So whether she is "going with these youths with her eyes opened—in the quest of adventure and excitement—with the hope that she may have a fling at the wild life before she experiences the bonds of matrimony—or whether she has innocently been led into their company believing them to be all right, I do not know. But these reports are worrying me a great deal.

I want my wife to come to me, in all the purity of her womanhood, enriched rather than defiled by her associations with other men. That does not seem to me to be unreasonable to expect even in our own modern days when the "freedom of women" has sometimes led to lax principles of morality. In fact that is what most men expect when they are ready to choose a life mate. I do not know what action to take—at times I feel absolutely sure that she could do no wrong. And then the doubt comes and tears down all the confidence I have placed in her proper conduct. I realize the great injustice people often do themselves by choosing the wrong kind of companions but I dont seem to know what course to take in this instance. Can you advise me, Minerva?—ANXIOUS.

A. You have to take a whole lot on faith and trust in this world, and there are a lot of things we can't lay down rules for and that includes how far the man in love can trust the girl of his choice, and inversely how far she can trust him. You have to judge a great deal by the knowledge you have of the character of each other, some to instinct and much to personal observation.

To love this girl you must have respect for her strength of mind and morals. But, separated from her as you are, and harassed by reports of her conduct it is not surprising that you are beset with doubts.

It is my opinion that the girl is merely seeking an outlet of frivolity from her confining labors and that she is finding this recreation well within the bounds of innocence, cleanliness and propriety. There are always so many people about ready to place the wrong construction upon a girl's gayety. I do not say this just because I like girls and have a strong feeling for their general reliability. But because I think it most unlikely that the engaged girl, she who is teaching school, is likely to jeopardize her chances by acting in a loose manner.

I would suggest that you write to her of what you have heard, tell her that you are not criticising her for seeking pleasure, but you merely wish to warn her against taking chances on going out with young men who have bad reputations. Do not venture to dictate to her, but merely make suggestions for her own good. Do not permit this thing to come between you to any serious extent. If you are restless to so great a degree, arrange to visit her and assure yourself she is the same trustworthy, sweet, honest girl you proposed to and who accepted your love and gave hers in return.

Questions Answered Briefly.

Olive: There are no hard and fast rules in the matter of usage of the various shaped knives, spoons and forks, and the same ones may be used for different things with propriety. Of course the question gets more complicated as the silversmakers produce greater varieties of implements. It is nice to have the various articles if ou can afford them. Otherwise you can get along with the plainer and commoner articles. For ice cream either a fork or spoon may be used. Of late years there has been an effort to discard the spoon entirely for this use. But unless the cream is frozen very hard, this presents difficulties and there are many who adhere to the old spoon custom ere.

In the newer sets o silver there are brry forks, small, slender, three-tined. The perforated spoon or three-tined fork either can be used for olives or pickles.

Bertram: It is the custom for a young man to obtain the "yes" from the girl of his choice before he approaches her father.

LONDON—Turkish papers in Constantinople published dispatches from Angora, announcing that a majority of the grand national assembly, supported by the military, demanded rejection of the Lausanne treaty.

Continue Wrangle Over Dry League's Financial Affairs

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—With four officials of the state Anti-Saloon League under subpoena, Acting District Attorney Pecora expected to present to a grand jury today evidence concerning the manner in which Superintendent William H. Anderson handled the organization's finances.

Mr. Anderson, speaking yesterday in an Albany pulpit, declared he was the victim of a "far-reaching conspiracy" in which Tammany wet republican machine politicians and wet financial interests were involved.

His charges that the conspirators were using Raymond B. Fosdick legal representative of the Rockefellers as a "defactor" to help their fight, brought an immediate response from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Telephoning from Ormond Beach, Fla., Mr. Rockefeller authorized a statement which said of Mr. Fosdick: "I have fully approved his every action, and he has had and still retains my full confidence."

Southern Vet. Pays Final Tribute to Last Union Solon

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The last confederate veteran in the house yesterday paid tribute to the memory of the last union veteran to serve in that body.

Speaking at memorial services in the house chamber, for the late Representative Henry Z. Osborne of California, Representative Stedman of North Carolina, declared that Mr. Osborne, though devoted to the cause of the Union states, was entirely free from sectional biases and numbered among his warmest friends those who had fought under the banners of Lee and Jackson.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflamation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Advertisement.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

Chamber of Commerce Urges Personal Loyalty to Lincoln By Purchasing Home Products

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has inaugurated a campaign of loyalty to Lincoln, but the business men are helpless to make the campaign effective unless each individual in the city, man and woman, assumes the responsibility of personal loyalty.

According to a report issued in 1921 the value of the wholesale business in Lincoln had increased from $22,031,000 in 1906 to $74,404,000, and the manufacturing business increased from $8,743,000 in 1906 to $41,250,000 in 1921. But this growth took place very largely in spite of the attitude of Lincoln people rather than through thier cooperation. Business men tell us that Lincoln people have a tendency to think that a home product is not as good as that which comes from a distance. Some individuals seem to think that if an article comes from Omaha it is better than if it were a Lincoln product, if it comes from Iowa, it is better than a Nebraska product, if it comes from New York or Boston it must be still better and if it is imported from a foreign country then it is truly wonderful.

Yet some of our home products have a very good national reputation. They are known for their quality in all parts of this country and in other countries as well. Some of our manufacturers who have a considerable output and ship to distant points sell practically nothing in Lincoln.

Manufacturers and jobbers have gone broke because their home people failed to support them. They had many friends here who felt sorry for them when they failed, but little did the friends realize that if they had given them a fair chance they would have prospered. They had never patronized these home firms; they had never even tried their products.

The plea is not for people to patronize home products at a sacrifice but for them to give these firms a chance. They are asked to give the home products an unbiased trial. Then if they find that the home products are as satisfactory as those they can get elsewhere they will find it to their advantage to use the home products. If they are not as satisfactory they are not asked to use them.

Some may argue that it is human nature to think that which comes from a distance is better than that of home make. It is often said that a young man starting out in a profession or business cannot do as well in the town where he grew up as among strangers because his home folks will not have confidence in him. They will say, "Why that is just John Jones. He is the boy that used to dig crawfish out of the mud and bring them home. We dont want John Jones to doctor us." Thus they reason, and they have Tom Smith who used to pull crawfish out of the mud in some distant state to doctor them.

Such a tendency does seems to be numbered among our human weaknesses. There is also another tendency almost as bad and perhaps more general—to use just what we have been used to using without any though as to where it was produced and thus out of pure thoughtlessness failing to give the Lincoln manufacturers and jobbers a chance.

What the Chamber of Commerce asks of Lincoln people is that they give products manufactured or jobbed in Lincoln a trial. After they have tried these products intelligently if they think they can do better by buying outside products they may feel free to do so.

There is no better was to be loyal to our city as a whole than by patronizing its industries. Our manufacturers and jobbers are among our largest tax payers. When we patronize them we are indirectly helping support Lincoln schools. When we buy New York products we are helping support New York schools. Aside from the taxes they pay, the money the Lincoln firms take in goes back to Lincoln very largely. Each firm employs a number of men and these men in turn support families here in Lincoln. They buy real estate here and build homes. Their trade keeps many retailers in business and in this way furnishes work for many others. When we patronize local jobbers and manufacturers we are furnishing employment for many of our neighbors. It is like tossing a pebble into the lake. The wave of prosperity that we start when we patronize home firms spreads out and out and out until it affects nearly everyphase of the city's life and growth.

To patronize home manufacturers and jobbers will require some time and thought on the part of us consumers. It means that when we buy groceries, when we buy material for the new home, when we buy anything else we inquire which brands are manufactured or at least jobbed in Lincoln. Then in the case of the smaller articles we will give the Lincoln products a trial and if we find that they are equal to outside products in every way we will buy them. In the case of articles that involve more expense and are bought less often we will carefully consider the Lincoln products before deciding what kind to buy. It may not be quite as easy to do this as to follow the path of habit, but will it net be worth while to do this for the sake of loyalty to our city?
